$10,000,000 AWAIT MISSING COUNTESS

Recalls Monstrous Story of Murders by Count de Lacyand Dr. Pantchenko.

Fortune, Was to Have Been Killed.

The Russian secret police are scouring O'Brien de Lacy, wife of the Russian nobleman who was sentenced to a Siberian prison for life at the conclusion of the most romarkable trial in the history of the Russian Empire. The wife the convicted potsoner has fallen heir to $10,000,000 left by her aunt, Mme. de Lazari, who died recently in Paris and who, for some unaccountable reason, failed to change her will subsequent to the horrifying revelations of the de Lacy trial.

Lazari, who died recently in Paris and who, for some unaccountable reason, failed to change her will subsequent to ning added that he entertained the strongest hopes as to Mr. Shepard's ultimate recovery.

The convicted Count, who planned wholesale murders for a fortune pattry Ame, de Lazari, is the sole heir of his wife under the Russian law, and in case of her death will have the distinction of being the richest life prisoner.

The De Lacys, previous to the shocking disclosures of the Pantchenko poisonings, which the Count was convicted of engineering, moved in the most exalted circles of Russian society and were freely admitted to the court of the Czar. The news that Mme. de Lazari bequeathed her entire great fortune to niece has caused a great sensation and has attreed the Russian authorities to immediate action in the case of the strange disappearance of the Countess de Lacy. Search for her throughout Europe has been fruitless, and now the activities of the Russian secret police have been transferred to America.

FATHER SUSPECTED HER OF PLOT TO KILL BROTHER. Immeditely after Count de Lacy was sentenced to penal servitude in Siberia for life, his wife was reported to have jost her reason. She had been forbidden o return to the home of her father, Gen. Boturlin, whose death her husband sought so that she could inherit the eneral's millions. De Lacy's fellow onspirator, Dr. Pantchenko, confessed hat he had brought about the death of the Countess's brother, Count Vassilli Boturlin, by inoculating him with holera bacteria. The old General pervisted in the belief that his daughter ad assisted in the plot, though she was not directly accused at the trial. After the conviction her family spurned The old aunt, Mme, de Lazari, who had been a mother to her, moved to Parls to escape from the scandal. She and also turned her piece from her and was the universal belief of the old eristocrat's relatives that she had made new will in which the names of the de Lacys were not mentioned.

Practically penniless, disowned by her relatives, denied by her former intimate riends, the beautiful and talented oung woman was reported to have fered an inquiry into her santty and made a provision for her removal to a ham's Vegenble Compound is a reprivate sanitarium, but when his agents | markable renedy for those distressegan a search for her they were unable to find any trace of her.

This search was begun before the eath of the millionaire aunt. It was dropped on the theory that the counters had put an end to nerself. Now that, if living, she is the mistress of an immense fortune, the search will he remused and carried to every corner

PLANNED TO REMOVE EVERY MEMBER OF WIFE'S FAMILY.

It was shown at the trial of Count c Lacy that he and his co-conspirator, Dr. Pantchenko, had attempted the life of Mme. de Lazari. The Count knew of the existence of the will, by which the old noblewoman's millions were bequeathed to his wife. It was part of his monstrous plan to remove every memer of his wife's family, so that there ould be no will contest following the wholesale murders. Dr. Pantenenko confessed at the trials last February that he had inoculated the old aunt with cholera bacteria, but she recovered. When she learned of the peril she had been in she fled from her home in at. Petersburg and hid herself in Paris fler health was badly broken and she led two weeks ago. During her seclusion in Paris she has

o communication with any member her family. Her brother, Gen. Botus sought but failed to get in toud with her. She was a widow and chile less and she died surrounded only F a few servants. A week ago the deovery was made that she had of destroyed the old will by which the ad made her niece her chief heir. Nor ad she made a new will. THOUGHT TO HAVE SOIGHT

He married into one othe richest families in Russia. He soon spent his wife's large fortune and his own, and then began that wholesale murder plot that will take its place with the most infamous crimes of history.

DR. PANTCHENKO GOT A FIF-TEEN YEAR SENTENCE.

Dr. Pantchenko, although painted at the trial as the archiffend whose scien-tific skill and cunning made the de Lacy murders possible, get off with a fifteen years' senience. Only by means of this venerable Mephistopheles—he continued to wear his spikes beard and mustaches at the trial—was it possible to convict Count de Lacy.

By subtle devices of his own inven-tion, confessed Dr. Pantenenko, he had murdered more men and women than his memory was capable of recalling. Even the Russian Court trembled while this cold-blooded old conspirator re-vealed that he had moved down his vic-USED CHOLERA GERMS.

When the cheered would not suffice he would use a rare polison.

There is no capital punishment for murder in Itussia. Crimes against the state are punishable with death, but crimes against the individual are punishable only by imprisonment. In sentencing Dr. Pantchenso the Court took
